What is Hydro-Dipping?

Hydro-dipping – also known as hydrographics, immersion printing or water transfer imaging – is a method of applying printed designs to three-dimensional surfaces. This process can be used on a variety of materials.

In the process, a poly-vinyl alcohol hydrographic film, which has been printed with the graphic image to be transferred, is carefully placed on the water's surface in a dipping tank. The surface tension of the water allows the pattern to curve around any shape. The ink adheres to the product and will not wash off.

The final result adds new dimension and a unique quality to the standard stainless options of beverage ware.

Adjust Your Grind

When using a salt or pepper mill, it's important to know the best uses for different grind sizes. Here are some general tips to follow when adjusting the size of your grind:

Fine grind — Ideal for seasoning dressings, mixed foods or purées.

Medium grind — A nice, general-purpose grind size for seasoning seafood, poultry and soups.

Course grind — Perfect for thick sauces and hearty meats (which can stand up to the additional seasoning).

The surface treatment on Mepra flatware is a P.V.D. (Physical Vapor Deposition) process; its technology was developed for the aeronautic industry and is used to shield NASA's Space Shuttle panels against corrosion and to protect fine jewelry.

In co-operation with renowned Italian universities, Mepra was the first to apply these treatments in order to achieve original color tonalities.

The characteristics of P.V.D. increases the flatware's durability – making it ideal for distinctive hotels, restaurants and catering services.

FOOD DELIVERY SOLUTIONS

Did you know that at least once per month, 86% of consumers use off-premise ordering while delivery is expected to increase by 12% each year*? That's why transportation is an absolute necessity when delivering to your customers. Reduce the risk of spills, leaks and contamination by using carriers that are the right size and will maintain the correct food temperatures while en route to your destination.

Beam Placemats

NEW!

Chilewich

- Made in the USA
- Free of phthalates
- Suitable for indoor and outdoor use
- Contains Microban® antimicrobial protection
- Wipes clean with damp cloth
- Can be washed in 180° F sanitizer

In this dynamic new design, bands of color intersect with narrow accent stripes in an exploded plaid, forming an internal frame within each rectangular placemat. Subtle tonal variations in the yarns ensure that Beam takes on a distinct character in each of three vibrant colorways.
